SUCCESS OF SHOW IS NOW ASSURED

Entries and Indications for Attendance Next Week Entirely Gratifying.

The amphilheatre of the Richmond liorse Show Association is rapidly being put in condition for the fourth annual exhibition, which opens next Tuesday night. Everything now justifies the prediction that the show will excel the success of its three predecessors, not only in the standard of the exhibition, but in point of attendance and public interest and as a social event.

The final preparations for the show are now nearing completion, and horses are already coming in for the show. The cleetricians yesterday completed the work of wiring the building, which will be illuminated by 1.300 incandescent bulbs and by forty-two are lights. These will brilliantly illuminate the big structure and show the horses and the handsome gowns of the laddes to advantage.

The tan-back show ring is being sprinkled and rolled and conditioned for the proud hoofs of the hig-steppers and the whiz of rubber-dred turnouts all next week. While this work is going on within the ring the boxes are being covered with burlans and every nock and corner swept and garnished for the reception of the association's guests. Mr. Robinson said that this led him to believe that he would be eligible to the Richmond union. Had he been eligible he says that he would have been pleased to have become a member and would have welcomed any opportunity to take an active part in the union's activities in Richmond. His ineligibility, he says, how ver, does not affect his standing, and will not form a barrier to him in his appointed work.

"You can catch more files with sugar than you can with vinegar, said John II. Donnelly, manager for the stables of Mrs. J. B. M. Grosvenor, in discussing the action of the Lynchburg Horse Show Association in threatening Mrs. Grosvepor with a suit for breach of contract nor with a sult for breach of contract in failing to exhibit her horses at the Lynchburg show.

That sentence well illustrates the effect of the action of the Lynchburg management upon exhibitors. They may be persuaded or induced to show, but they cannot be compelled to do so, and any effort at compulsion is considered likely to react upon those exerting such effort.

experienced managers of horse show exhibits in the country, laughed at the idea of a suit for breach of contract. He idea of a suit for breach of contract. He stated that he wrote the Lynchburg management two weeks ago, telling them to withdraw the Grosvonor entries, for the reason that the horses if shown in Lynchburg all the week and then shipped to Richmond, would be in no fit condition to be shown here. Of the two shows the Richmond show was regarded as preferable. He states that he received no reply from the management to this letter, nor to several letters and telegrams addressed to them. Tho only effect of their withdrawal from the Lynchburg show would be to forfeit their entrance money, about $350, and this they expected to do when they decided not to exhibit at the Lynchburg show.

No Rule Against It.

No Rule Against It.

There is no clause in the rules and regulations of the Lynchburg Association which would make the Grosvenors liable at law for failure to exhibit there. In the Richmond show regulations rule 34 provides that:

"In order to prevent the non-exhibition of animals which have been entered for the show, thus causing unnecessary preparations and expense, a fine of $10 will be levied on each entry not exhibited when called by the programme," etc. There is no such regulation in the provisions of the Lynchburg show, and even risions of the Lynchburg show, and even visions of the Lynchburg show, and even if there were, as in the case of the Richmond show, it applies only to horses on the grounds of the association. That, said Mr. Donnelly, is the universal rule among horse shows. The forfeiture of the entry money and stall rent fees is the only possible penalty for the withdrawal of entries when the horses are not on the show grounds. not on the show grounds.

that I may send with such horses, that I make no claim therefor; and I further agree to forfoit and pay to the association the sum of $100, as and for liquidated damages if the animal or any of the animals, which I may exhibit, are suffering from any contagious or infectious disease."

This is the agreement entered into by for damages is, of course, reciprocal.

If the exhibitor has no redress for damages, neither has the association.

Hall for the purpose of electing a commandant for the Home, to fill the vacancy.

No little interest is being taken in the appointment, but the members of the board decline to discuss the situation or mention the names of those who will come up for election. There seems to be mo doubt about the board making their selection at to-night's meeting, but as to the successful candidate, every one seems to be in the dark.

Thus far it is said that Mr. Charles P. Young, Colonal Charles Euker, Mr. George Winfree, all of this city, and Colonei Finney, of Powhatan, are leading aspirants for the position. Friends of these gentlemen have been working hard for them, and all seem hopeful of election. At this time it is thought more than probable that the real fight will be between Mr. Young and Colonel Euker.

Several members of the board were seen last night, but declined to discuss the matter.

Judge Witt yesterday heard argument in the Hustings Court in a case that is regarded as a rather novel one.

The style of the proceedings is the city of Richmond vs. Carnthers, and the case involves the right of a person to purchase the carcass of a dead snimal, an ordinance of the city giving them all to the Divise Manufacturing Company. Carnthers is a decree for Bivkerstaff, who decided to test the ordinance. The former was arrested for moving a dead animal, and was fined $20 in the Police Court. The case was appealed to the Hustings Court for final adjudication. Judge Witt has the matter under advisement.
